 100. 100. The hundredth part of the paper

A close-up photograph of a light brown, textured surface, likely the cover or endpaper of an old book. The surface is covered with numerous small, dark, irregular specks and fibers. Two prominent dark circular marks are visible: one on the left and one on the right. The right mark is slightly larger and has a faint horizontal line extending from its right side. The overall texture is grainy and uneven.

[Faint handwritten Burmese script]

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a historical document or manuscript. The text is written on aged, yellowed paper and is mostly illegible due to fading and damage. The script appears to be a form of early modern European cursive, possibly from the 16th or 17th century. The text is organized into several lines, with some words appearing to be in a different script or language, possibly Latin or Greek, interspersed with the main body of text. The overall appearance is that of a historical record or a personal letter.

[illegible]

A close-up photograph of a piece of aged, yellowed paper. Two dark, circular holes are punched through the paper, one on the left and one on the right. The paper has a mottled, textured appearance with various shades of yellow and brown. There are some faint, illegible markings and small dark spots scattered across the surface. The edges of the paper are slightly irregular and worn.
